See the New Technologies Zone at the Central History Point Live

Would you like to see the unique ORB X gaming capsules, VR stations, and experience the educational and gaming magic of the IPN New Technologies Zone in Warsaw without leaving your home? Now it’s possible! Visit the live stream straight from the Central History Point and see how immersive historical education works in practice.

Live broadcast from the IPN New Technologies Zone in Warsaw

The stream will start at 4:30 PM on Monday (23.02). You can watch it on the “Stokovsky” channel on kick.com. During the broadcast, a live chat will be available, allowing you to share your thoughts, ask questions, and comment in real time. So feel free to join the stream via your phone or PC and visit the Central History Hub without leaving your home.

The aim of the event is to showcase the IPN New Technologies Zone, present all its attractions, and introduce its educational offer. This unique space combines a passion for gaming with historical education. Here, completely free of charge, you can take part in all the projects of the IPN New Technology Division – games and applications available both on PC and in VR (virtual reality).

IRL straight from IPN – what does it mean and what will you learn?

Live broadcasts are characterized by spontaneity and a high level of audience engagement. In real time, viewers can react, comment, and interact with the hosts via chat.

The abbreviation “IRL” stands for “In Real Life,” which loosely translates as “in real life.” This type of broadcast takes place in a real-world location, not inside a game or application. The IRL stream on the “Stokovsky” channel will be broadcast directly from the New Technologies Zone of the Central History Point. It will feature PC and VR games and applications, ORB X gaming capsules, and the “Digital Heroes” project.
