

Pińczów – the next Future History Mobile Stop station

Pińczów, formerly known as Piędziców, is a town in the Świętokrzyskie Voivodeship. It boasts a rich history, beautiful landscapes, and historic architecture. From September 12 to September 14, Pińczów was enriched by the arrival of the Mobile “History of the Future” Station.

The press briefing took place on the first day, September 12, led by Dr. Robert Piwko, head of the IPN Delegation in Kielce. Attendees included Adrianna Paradowska, Director of the New Technology Division, and Marcin Wojniak, the Pińczów District Governor. During the conference, the discussion focused on the role of new technologies in historical education and the importance of developing digital skills among teachers, parents, and educators.

From the very first hour, the Future History Mobile Stop was filled with guests. The largest group of visitors was school youth, many of whom visited the station multiple times—first as part of a school trip, and later independently, to participate once again in the immersive history lessons. The enthusiasm of young people in discovering Polish history continues to amaze.
